

Maisie Peters, Therapy

Destiny

When we met I told you I'd been treated carelessly

Next to me

In the bed of poison oak you were the remedy

You couldn't have loved a girl any harder than you loved me

So I couldn't ask anymore

And I know it's wrong

But now you're gone, honey, I can't sleep

I'm just talking to your memory

I still love you, but you're taking me

From your arms

Back to therapy, therapy

Oh Lord, I'm going back to therapy, therapy

You swore it's somewhere I would never be, never be

So how come you're taking me

From your arms back to therapy?

I was abandoned, but you swore that you'd be there for me

Carefully

You touched me, now your touch will last for centuries

You couldn't have loved a girl any harder than you loved me

So I couldn't ask any more

At least I had you for this long

Now you're gone, honey, I can't sleep

I'm just talking to your memory

I still love you, but you're taking me

From your arms

Back to therapy, therapy

Oh Lord, I'm going back to therapy, therapy

You swore it's somewhere I would never be, never be

So how come you're taking me

From your arms

You gave me the world and you gave me your word

It built me like a promise 'til it broke me like a curse

With your shadow in the door, you were turning in your key

I knew loving you was letting you leave

Now you're gone, honey, I can't sleep

I'm just talking to your memory

I still love you, but you're taking me

From your arms

Back to therapy, therapy

Oh Lord, I'm going back to therapy, therapy

You swore it's somewhere I would never be, never be

So how come you're taking me

From your arms

Back to therapy, therapy

Oh Lord, I'm going back to therapy, therapy

You swore it's somewhere I would never be, never be

So how come you're taking me

From your arms back to therapy?
