Matthew West, History

West It's been a bad day
You've been looking back
And all you can see is everything you wish you could take back
All your mistakes
A world of regrets
All of those moments you would rather forget
I know it's hard to believe Let me refresh your memory

CHORUS

Yesterday is history And history is miles away So, leave it all behind you But let it always remind you of the day The day that love made history

You know you can't stay right where you fell The hardest part is forgiving yourself But let's take a walk into today And don't let your past get in the way

Would you believe that you are history in the making, in the making? Every choice that you are making Every step that you are taking Every chain that you are breaking History is in the making Every word that you are saying Every prayer that you are praying Every chain that you are breaking History is in the making History is in the making History is in the making
