

Melon Cravin, Silk Sunflowers

just because she hides her eyes doesn't mean she's crying just as sure as winter comes shouldn't mean her love is dying you can feel the sun shining down even in december

i see your candle flickering it lights the room inside me and i've watched you while you sleep like heaven was beside me now that we both sleep alone i hope you still remember the best part of all the reason i called i found you're silk sunflowers it's been a while since i've seen you smile i gave you silk sunflowers you search for something beautiful in you i find my shelter a memory that's torn and dry can still hold us together and if you say you'll stay with me my love i will surrender chorus of fallen queens and broken dreams...they'll always be behind you and the promise we made long ago...i hope these will remind you
