

Meridene, The Sea Change

United in your focus, there still comes a day,
When you must test out the waters, all on your own,
The waves will sway,
In opposite directions, and take your friends away,
To strengthen your resilience, float on your own,
Because you know...

It won't be so bad, in the morning I say, Couldn't be my fault, cause I muscled on and,
You jumped off the ship, the first signs of sinking,
But we're still sailing on, broken once but twice as strong,

As the day in that whiskey drunken haze we all looked in one direction, and saw the stars with the brightest gaze
And you picked along on banjo, and I strummed on the guitar but free booze they can frustrate, and bar the course, with heavy force...

But the story's still, being written I say Turn it upside down, shake your fears away, Maybe on your own, you're reaching something that together's inside, so get on your horse and ride!!!

We'll plot our course for better times and fill our sails with prayers and pride though the water's dark and cold tonight we'll sail for morning find first light strong backs to bind us to the sight our weary eyes catch land tonight
