

Michael W. Smith, A Little Stronger Everyday

I was throwing away what I needed most
It was the father, son, and the holy ghost
A little carnal knowledge is a dangerous thing
It'll eat a hole in the brain

I'd be the biggest fool in the whole universe
To trade a heavenly blessing for a worldly curse
I was a weaker man til I made my stand
Now I am here to make a change

I'm running blind on the wheels of faith
Moving to the beat of a heart that prays
Hanging on every word you said
I get a little stronger every day

Ain't gonna find any help on the TV
Or written down on the pages of People magazine
It takes digging a little deeper into the good book now
For a little sacred advice

I'm running blind on the wheels of faith
Moving to the beat of a heart that prays
Hanging on every word you said
I get a little stronger every day

Getting strong, stronger now, every day
Getting strong, stronger now, every day
I'm getting stronger

I'm running blind on the wheels of faith
Moving to the beat of a heart that prays
Hanging on every word you said
I get a little stronger every day
