

Mike & The Mechanics, You Never Change

Lying sleepless wide awake, wondering how much I can take
You never change
Tired of living with your lies, comes to me as no surprise
You never change

No more tears left to cry
I have to forget you, all over again
No matter how many times that you try
I know that you never change

Like a habit hard to break, I can learn from my mistakes
You never change
Now I feel like I've been here before, oh a thousand times or more
But you never change

No more tears left to cry
I have to forget you, all over again
No matter how many times that you try
I know that you never change

All this time I finally realize that it's all over
There's no point in taking time to talk it over
There's too much sorrow, too much pain to go through it all again
Cause you never change

No more tears left to cry
I have to forget you, all over again
No matter how many times that you try
I know that you never

No more tears left to cry
I have to forget you, all over again
No matter how many times you try to explain
I know that you never change

You never change