Miranda Lambert, Love's Looking For You

(Miranda Lambert)

Maybe you're just jaded from some nobody's unforgotten words Maybe you're just faded, a little gray from every time that you've been hurt So you're lookin for your skin that you never did fit in You can't hide when you're turned inside out Love is looking for you now

Maybe you been burnin' but you can't blow out a flame that you can't find Maybe you've been thirsty but the rain just aint enough when you're this dry So you're runnin' from the water and the fire's getting hotter I think you better find some lever ground Love is lookin' for you now Love is lookin' for you now

Maybe you been wearing the shoes that someone else is wearing now Maybe you've been swearing forever might have already run out You can't love yourself at the expense of someone else You can't hide a liar from the truth Love is lookin' for you Love is lookin' for you

I've been looking for you Baby I've been lookin.. I've been looking for you
