

Moonlight Awakening, Any Day Like Today

breathe inside denial into the ashes of our wasted time like an only child who's so convincing care never finds truth in these surroundings, the longest mass-conception of disgust faith in these corruptions, the furthest misdirection of our trust only when we feel it, ourselves, do we see what we could've seen only if we feel it, we rise above to all we could've been on any day like today, it might have mattered to me on any day like today, i would've cared to see it was only yesterday that it mattered to me it was only yesterday i would've cared to see
