

Museum, For The Very First Time

come beside me and take a deep breath lay your arms around me for phenomemal distress where did your conflicts go they've fallen asleep on empty words that you speak come a bit closer and do what you like lay your arms around me and enjoy the quiet where did your fortunes go for once again automated on each other's skin

I'll wake you in the morning before the sunrise I'll show you how it sparkles on the inside we'll go to the carparks and watch the sunrise for the very first time come beside me and say something real lay your arms around me and show me how you feel where did your child eyes go they've fallen asleep on empty words that you have to speak

I'll wake you in the morning before the sunrise
I'll show you how it sparkles on the inside

it feels like loosing all my words and all my sense of what we are
