Negative, An Ornament

Don't say "I'm sorry" again Doesn't give you the right To be someone else Would be pleased to love and share But inside I'm locked I can't even cry

Love only matters When it comes to the end Love only matters Makes you rise again

I'm just an ornament An ornament to your face Not enough, but it feels right That you keep me alive When you hold me tight

Both ends are burning fast Would you stand by me When things are getting bad? And the colors here will fade Would you help me see Real shades of grey?

Love only matters When it comes to the end Love only matters Makes me rise again

I'm just an ornament An ornament to your face Not enough, but it feels right That you keep me alive When you hold me tight

I'm just an ornament An ornament in your garden Not enough, but it feels right That you keep me alive When you bring the rain, rain, rain

Read between
The lines
This is fragile
Only for you and I
All I want is
That you love me
As I am

Don't say "I'm sorry" again Doesn't give you the right To be someone else Someone else Someone else