

Neuraxis, A Curative Struggle

Evolutionary world

Antagonisms are natural, only secured by steadiness

Confronted with the task of regulations

War is the heritage of evolving man, peace is the yardstick measuring advancement

Reaction to irritations, conciliation attends upon the solution

Warfare persists because man is human, evolved from an animal, and all animals are bellicose

Ancient ones regarded it a virtue to shed alien blood

A strong medicine, very costly

Curative of certain disorders - breaks the society

Imposed discipline

A premium on fortitude

Fostered nationalism

Annihilating the weak and the unfit

Dissolved the illusion of equality and stratified organization

Olden wars strengthened nations - resulted in decimation of the inferiors

Modern struggles disrupt culture

Modern conflict is selective destruction

The conquests of science, and social achievement - discovering a leader
