

New Atlantic, Swimming In Lake Erie

And we try so hard to make it up
All of us lay here wasting our lives
We&#039;ll forget our past, throw it away, start over again.
If it means that much to make it up,
I&#039;ll say this one passive remark just to keep you awake.
Is it to much to give to be constant
To be constant and comical.
We mix in with the leaves
And stay here all night.
We&#039;ll forget our past, throw it away, start over again.
If it means that much to make it up.
I&#039;ll say this one passive remark just to keep you awake.
We&#039;ll forget our past, throw it away, start over again.
We&#039;ll blow up the sun just to keep out the light.
One passive remark just to keep you.
