

Oceania, Sundowning

blankness impinges from all sides groping blindly through time vacant stares and helpless smiles blunt days gouged out this mind feel the grass and smell the ground see the sun with closed eyes as you dissolve to the sound of rustling leaves and wind chimes she hid under the porch she wanted to be alone