Origin, Inner Reflections

Look into me painstakingly, what do you see? Stop judging me from what you see, try empathy Society's conformity, opressing me Tried desperately from infancy past puberty Swallow me from my birth Walk in the walk, talk in the talk, fall prey to sin Don't stare at me half-heartedly, close-minded prick I am not you, you are not me, I empathize, simply ask, go fuck yourself

Trust in me that someday people see To shut their eyes and open up their hearts and minds What will our own pupils learn from us? Time we spent inducing fear in our children's lives Peers build up pressure, lack of a response Closed feelings lock tight, pain and sore regret Planned expections fail a true burden Screams cased in silence, mute and cannot speak

Do as I say, not as I will do What can we learn from our gross insane state of mind? Break free from these chains that bind you down Step outside yourself and tell me what do you see? I look into you, hide inside yourself Shed all of your skin, bare your naked flesh Trust all things to be, see reality It's chance happening, don't waste it on hate

Now look back right at me, I am you, don't you see? Look real deep in me, I am you, equally Can't you see human indecency is what you're feeding me? You are blind, deaf and mute, your own delinquency keeps you from seeing me So much fear from your eyes, look at cautiously Already judging me, stare in deep at yourself Mirroring images reflect your cowardice
