

Parikrama, But It Rained

Wrapped in a polythene, tucked away safe in my mind a little goodbye, maybe, or just a passing smile

The birds fly away to the sky still searching for home a bunch o' paper flowers, or a little child left all alone Can somebody hear me, I'm screaming from so far away morning who'll calm you, the evening's eclipsed again

Well does life get any better
more yesterday than today
How I thought the sun would shine tomorrow
But it rained...

They justified the cause for which Daddy might give up his life, it's been so long, so long a time but still I miss Daddy at night.
The ache is long gone but the never keeps staring at me the waters in the seas are high, and all the sand castles have drowned

more yesterday than today
How I thought the sun would shine tomorrow
But it rained...
