

Patti Scialfa, Each Other's Medicine

So all that loneliness for a moment is through and now it's going to take time to find some faith for you you've got a history of crash landings coming down on nothing but a prayer and finding no one there to break the fall so you got all twisted up inside got a new hairdo and a big disguise till no one could recognize you at all

Well that's all right' that's o.k.
I'm going to love you' any which way that's o.k. ... that's all right we'll be each other's medicine tonight

Well the path of resistance for a moment now has cleared and you want to open up but you're locked down shut with fear because you know the lonely corner where the blind man begs for change you've carried that cup and cane before and you never get what you think you deserve so you settle for token kindness and sympathetic words anything to ease the pain

Well that's all right' that's o.k.
I'm going to have you any which way

Well all the stopped clocks are ticking it's time I do believe when you've got nothing left to give and you're too paralysed to receive when you're unfamiliar to yourself and a stranger to everybody else when you're too lost and too gone to see

Well that's all right' that's o.k.
I'll recognize you any which way
that's o.k. ... that's all right
