

Pretenders, All My Dreams

All my dreams
Still relive you
If this is what you left for me
I forgive you
Never do I despair
When I kneel to say my prayers
When slumber fills my head
I'll be visiting your bed

All my dreams
Recollect you
And so darling in a way
Our love remains new
Funny little things
You touch my fingers and fondle my rings
Then tenderly without violence
We make love in perfect silence

Come, come into my room again
Come, come again
Oh come, come into my gloom again
End this solitude again

I finally took that picture down
I'd been staring at it for hours and hours
Slipping in and out of consciousness
But what I can't figure out
Why did you do that?
Disappear on me like that?
Oh baby please come back where I can touch you
Right here where I can see you

Come, come into my room again
Come, come again
Oh come, come into my gloom again
Break, break this solitude again

All of my dreams of your affection
Never have I known
Such sweet perfection
No drug-induced bliss
Could ever reach the heights of this
Eternal and so pure
Help me to endure
All my dreams