Primordial, The Gathering Wilderness

You say you know me I'm the Poison in your veins

My Faith is not welcome here I Break the young and the cold

There is a Darkness here You cannot imagine you cannot fathom It speaks to me in tongues Can you hear it?

I've built my tower of song From words as bitter splintered bone Gnarled and wretched, spiteful and harsh I've cursed the vermin, the vermin of the earth I've wished pestilence upon the foul and weak Not just men, but woman and children too With a rusted blade across their throats

I've played the tyrant's hand Against the rhyme and reason of fools I've prayed to sickly children In their blackened cities of Filth You say you know me? Do you? I'm the poison in your veins My Faith it is not welcome here

The Wilderness is Gathering all its Children in...