

Ray Price, Only Bridge

You've always put a torch to each and every bridge you've crossed
With each and every one a little more was lost
I hope you take enough mem'ries to keep you when you're gone
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on
You might be by yourself out there till God knows when
For you I know there'll be no crossing back again
If you ever learn by then you'll already be alone
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on
There's a golden rule but somehow you failed to learn it
You find a bridge to cross and then you burnt it
The saddest part is that you were only doing yourself wrong
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on
