Reilly Maggie, Torn Between Lovers

Where to begin How do I start At the moment Love lit the spark Staring at the dawn It's impossible to bear Endless longing Hanging in the air You go running through the night Try to chase away the pain With all those empty words Still drumming in your brain To be torn between lovers Impossible fate How do you choose When you've left it all too late But every time I turn to you I see him in your face And every time I reach for you He's standing in your place I don't know how to say this His love I can't erase So you scream into the wind You do your crying in the rain Chase after shadows But it just won't ease the pain To be torn between lovers A terrible fate How do you choose When you've left it much too late But every time I turn to you He's looking through your eyes And when I try to touch you I'm overcome by lies And there's no easy answer To this love I can't deny But every time I turn to you I see him in your face And every time I reach for you He's standing in your place I don't know how to say this His love I can't erase But every time I turn to you He's looking through your eyes And when I try to touch you I'm overcome by lies And there's no easy answer To this love I can't deny