Reset, Friend

We started off, a little wide ago We built this little boat And sailed it off to sea Then we brought a friend along the way We decided he would stay Stay with you and me Bought some sticks And put then in your in hands I taught you how to stand I taught you everything I opened up your mind to something new And now it something you can use You don't have to thank me But don't expect me, to be smiling When we meet again I think you'll understand I don't think I want to be your friend Now there's only one solution And of course you jump up to conclusions And you can count how much we owe you But you just lost something much greater You just lost your best friend So don't expect me, to be smiling When we meet again I think you'll understand I don't think I want to be your friend You had your chance, you did not change We took your future, in our own hands This is no game, I will not wait I can't wait for you to change now You had your chance, you did not change We tool our future, in our own hands This is not a game, I will not wait I can't wait for you to change now
