

Rise Against, Dancing For Rain

we're losing daylight but i can't work any faster. under the veil of dusk we go on don't close your eyes.
what if it all disappears in the shadows that reach from the stars?

if i held my ground would you ask me to change?
this drought bleeds on now we're dancing for rain we drink the air but it's still not the same these worlds collide but the distance remains we point the finger, never accept the blame and i know.. i know let's go!

the waters gone but the fire still rages on here the men all shrugged their shoulders and left we sleep so sound in rooms just up the stairs will you save us like you saved them?

if i held my ground would you ask me to change?
this drought bleeds on now we're dancing for rain
these worlds collide but the distance remains
we point the finger, never accept the blame and i know.. i know

you've bled me dry, but i'm still breathing i swear i'm sucking dry the sky and you won't ever find us kneeling or swallowing your lies

if i held my ground would you ask me to change?
this drought bleeds on now we're dancing for rain
these worlds collide but the distance remains
we point the finger, never accept the blame, and i know.. i know this drought bleeds on... this drought bleeds on.
