

Rise Against, Obstructed View

To all you people standing proud, thinking you know what I'm about:
I think you can fuck yourself
From your safe distance in this crowd
That's when your voice becomes so loud
Still trying to keep us down

Walk one mile in shoes I never asked to fill
But still I press on.

I slipped, I fell, then I lost everything
My hope, my faith, in what the future brings
In hopes of pushing past the ties that bring us down
We sing together now.

Give me one reason to look you in the eye
Tell me exactly why it is that you think you are worth my time

To all the ones that shake my hand
Then talk your shit behind my back
To those who claim they understand
But never heard a word of what I said
In spite of you I am still here
This vision has never been more clear
As we sing together now.
