

Rod Stewart, You Got A Nerve

(R. Stewart / G. Grainger)

Here you stand with tears in your eyes crying into my arms pleading with me to take you back teasing me with your charms

But you got a nerve to come round here after all you've said and done I thought I had seen everything obviously I was wrong

'Cause where were you when the sun went down Skies turned dark and gray Where were you when the north winds blew Honey tell me where were you

I heard you were living down in Brazil with them high class friends of mine I can't believe I was so naive Did I never once cross your mind

You told them all I was down and out My existence you even denied Oh what pleasure it gives me now to know that you're bleeding inside

You were my life, you were my breath
You were every move I ever made But recently my opinion's changed
The joke's on you I'm afraid

'Cause I have a woman so beautiful
For you I could no longer wait Please go away you may spoil everything Your love has turned up too late

Go away, go away
Please, please go away
I loved you once
I don't love you now
Please, please go away
