

Sam Shaber, Tempting

You turned around to face me
And I - I lost my stare
'Cause your smile was so accepting
That the rest of me lay bare

And you're so tempting
With your deep river eyes
You're so tempting
A suspected surprise
You're so tempting
With your summer almond skin
It's hard not to rise up and ask you in

Your bones they sank right through me
Your soul it filled my eyes
Your face it burned so brightly
Brought to June December fire

And you're so tempting
With your deep river eyes
You're so tempting
A suspected surprise
You're so tempting
With your summer almond skin
It's hard not to rise up and ask you in

And something gently broke free
As I lay breathing your fresh air
You didn't need a map of me
You just knew the way there

And if in time we meet again
Under other starry skies
Will you move me again my friend
Move me 'til I
Will you move me again my friend
Move me 'til I cry

And you're so tempting
With your deep river eyes
You're so tempting
A suspected surprise
You're so tempting
With your summer almond skin
It's hard not to rise up and let you
It's hard not to rise up and let you
It's hard not to rise up and let you in