Samson, Hammerhead

A story is told, that in Asgard of old, Was a hammer of great might By the furnace light in the depth of night They cast an ingot bold.

Can you hear the hammerhead in the wind Can you hear the hammerhead in the wind

They hammered and wrought and the rune spell caught And engraved upon its shaft, With a head of steel beneath which all men would kneel, And would lay down the sword, at last.

Can you hear the hammerhead in the wind Can you hear the hammerhead in the wind They laid on the anvil, a steel cold bar, Needed no fire nor file But their sledgehammers following, like thunder rolled And Sindre, sang runes by the fire.
