

Sanctuary Rig, You Are You (Indeed, Baby!)

Oh baby so aloof
Can't face the natural truth
I guess we've got a lot to learn
You're two people night and day
It doesn't matter anyway
Don't want to see you crash and burn

I thought that I knew you
I don't know who I'm talking to
You're looking at me - you're not who I see...
I don't know who I'm talking to

All this time I couldn't find what was happening inside you
You made sure that you closed the door, you did so well to hide you
Common sense, your pretence, I could not get past you
No-one knew, only you, firmly to your mast you

Then one day it fell away when you least expected
Flashing light, such an eerie sight, you were you reflected
Big surprise, thin disguise, hole above your shoulder
Pain and joy! Girl and boy? Suddenly much older...

All your tears, so many years living in the twilight
Night and day, a different way, looking through the skylight
Truth or dare, I don't care, everything you sold me
You're still you through and through, everything you told me

Now I know that I know you
Now I know who I'm talking to
You're looking at me and you're all that I see
Now I know who I'm talking to
