

Scott Matthews, Eyes Wider Than Before

Oh Lord; that distant beam of light
and drive-by neon floods my weary eyes.
It illuminates; my soul is inspired.
I'm heading your way,
with the traffic by my side.

Remember how it was before;
just a minute away,
I'll be knocking on your front door.
Don't underestimate this precious time.
Every second is treated as though
there is no time.

Your eyes are wider than before
So little has changed
but your eyes now see much more

Hush, now sway and fall asleep.
Gonna drive you away from the trampling of bustling feet.
you can lose your troubled thoughts,
for tonight at least.

you can wake in the morning,
feeling that you can breathe.

Little darling you're mine for tonight.
Your mellow and tender self
is hard to find.

From you, I turn all doubts deep inside.
I surrender myself to your presence
and peace of mind.

Your eyes are wider than before
So little has changed
but your eyes now see much more

so much more
soooo, so much more
so much more
so much more.
