

Scott Walker, If She Walked Into My Life

Did she need a stronger hand?
Did she need a lighter touch?
Was I soft, or was I tough?
Did I give enough?
Did I give too much?

At the moment that she needed me
Did I ever turn away?

Would I be there when she called?
If she walked in to my life today?

Did she mind the lonely nights?
Did she count the empty days?
Was I silent, was I cold?
Was I too quick to scold?
Was I too slow to praise?

And there must have been a million things
My old heart forgot to say
Would I think of one or two?
If she walked into my life today

Should I blame the times I pampered her
Or blame the times I bust her
What a drag
I never really found the girl before I lost her

Where the years a little fast?
Was the world a little free?
Was there too much of the crowd
All too lush and loud
And not enough of me?

Though I&#039;ll ask myself my whole life long
What went wrong along the way?
Would I make the same mistakes
If she walked into my life today?
