One lonely moon
About where my dear is looking from
And probably singing to the beautiful full moon

These flapping wings, a bird begins a journey
I searched for the reason I love in the landscape

Because I love you, hold me in your arms
I searched for the sea I wish to return to inside a painting

How many moons are there?
The path home to my room alone
The various nights you protected

In moonlight like this, a bird is taking off now
To what extent will I want to love only this feeling

Because I love you. To a map of the sky I admire
I hold my hands high and laugh; I found yet another moon
