Sense Field, Sage

the wind picks up and the birds surround us you cover up you settle down drink from the well, drink from the fountain it feels like a Sunday the morning took over and left me with no clue there's no one there's nothing colliding together you're moving me some way and you are the theme of the day your words go deeper and I thank you and I thank you we'll be back tomorrow in a place where there are no limits we don't draw the line for anyone drink from the well, drink from the fountain no, it feels like Sunday the morning took over and left me with no clue there's no one, there's nothing colliding together you're moving me some way you are the theme of the day your, your words go deeper and I thank you and I walk away and I walk away and the wind picks up and the birds surround us you cover up you settle down drink from the well, drink from the fountain it feels like a Sunday the morning took over and over and left me with no clue there's no one, no one there's nothing colliding together you're moving me some way and you are the theme of the day it feels like a Sunday the morning took over and over and left me with no clue there's no one, no one nothing colliding together you're moving me some way and you are the theme for the day
