

Shadow Host, In The Mirrorland

I came from another world from the mirror's other side I'm on my way to nowhere but I hope to meet my fatherland again at the end of my time born as king's son but now I'm just a stranger in your god, godforsaken land lost in your lies inside this sunless desert I'm walking through shadows four mirror walls held me... forever... through dream and nightmare I walk alone
when mirrors rise before me when faces melt in glass away
the mind leaves me
I know it's time to run when shadows are really walking when guardian angel sleeps still the ancient story ends
and light grows dim
in the mirrorland
I ever knew I have no obsessions
I ever knew I have no obsessions but faces in mirrors I saw them before this world lives by laws of fear and insanity the lies bears the madness that grows up in me I just cry... don't speak distorted truth don't bear another lie through dream and through nightmare I'll come back now falling...
when mirrors rise before me
when faces melt in glass away
the mind leaves me
I know it's time to run
when shadows are really walking
when guardian angel sleeps still
the ancient story ends
and light grows dim
in the mirrorland
I've lost the road back to my home I still cannot remember my name my quest for the light will never end while the walls of glass standing still around me the day has gone and lie has won
when mirrors rise before me
when faces melt in glass away
the mind leaves me
I know it's time to run
when shadows are really walking
when guardian angel sleeps still
the ancient story ends
and light grows dim
in the mirrorland