

Shout Out Out Out Out, They Tear Down Houses

They tear down houses, don't they?
They're building tombs instead of homes
They come with bulldozers to build their condominiums
And they just rush down on, don't they?
The ones who jet to buy these things
The ones who still pay rent but somehow think they own something
And I know that money talks and I know response is great
But it still breaks my heart to see our old homes torn away.

Well, I know that cities grow and so do the housing needs
This doesn't smell like demand, it only reeks of greed
And I know that money talks and I know response is great
But it still breaks my heart to see our old homes torn away.
They tear down houses, don't they?
They're building tombs instead of homes
They come with bulldozers to build their condominiums.
And they just rush down on, don't they?
The ones who jet to buy these things
The ones who still pay rent but somehow think they own something.

They tear down houses, don't they?
They tear down houses, don't they?
They tear down houses, don't they?
They tear them down.
They tear them down.

They tear down houses, don't they?
They're building tombs instead of homes
They come with bulldozers to build their condominiums
And they just rush down on, don't they?
The ones who jet to buy these things
The ones who still pay rent but somehow think they own something.
