Sinamore, Dressed In White

I open the door and see the shadows covering this place The dreams sheltered in white sheet I Feel the fire in vein it's killing me again (and again) You hide the price in a twisted mind In silence there are no words to anyone You fail to ignore me You fail to approve yourself The game that you play is the last that will fail I'm still standing Waiting the savior of change in first dying day Unspeakable silence it may follow through the end