Sleeping At Last, Love Never Fails

Underneath the braided sky You were there to hold me When I cried.

These sketches of heaven Light our eyes with grace.

That night, where water carried reflections Of October skies.

Although my words failed, You knew what I was trying to say. And though my hands weak by sorrow, Still would never let go of this memory. Where the trees bowed from the wind, You whispered "I promise, I promise you". You held my hands tight. Comfort remains.