Sodom, After the Deluge

Take my soul to god! It was a time when tyrants ruled the earth Mankind's malice showed no remorse His self-created empire troubled him highty All pursuit of honor was so mighty A father of three sons, called Noah, appeared Inspired by god and religious Rescued from all that wanted flesh Flying with sons, women and beasts

Noah realized all to the protector's command Alive on the ground Forty days and forty nights It shall be rain in the land of promise On seventh day gates get open Waters covered great mountains All what a living Odem possessed Died exterminated

Well of deep get clog, rain sink away The waters decrease He opens the windows of his wooden ark As the ground dry up he leaves the dark With all the living creatures Increased by himself, fulfilled the earth With fear and terror turned away

I will never more cursed the earth For mankind's will Their thoughts are evil in their youth All I've done I repent So long as the earth lived Shouldn't stop sowing and crop Frost and heat Summer and winter Day and night Who spilled human blood? That blood gets spilled by human being And Noah realized it all To the protector's command
