Sodom, Enchanted Lands

From the dawn of time we came To find the place of promise Moving silently down Through war disabled centuries

Living many secret lives Unrecognised by human eyes Struggling to reach the aim To dwell in perpetuality

We are the messengers Of inmost thought Our words of confession Fall away to nought

Domination of the universe Contains our vital interests Swift coursing blood of our veins Cured the grieving pains

When the few who remain
Will battle to the last
For enchanted lands
Take charge of reign
Leave behind the past
Early history in our hands
Living in the land of promise
Beyond the other world

Our mission is done Fear neither men nor fates Pray for disease But escape your soul

Duration of 100 lives Get the worlds undoing Because no one ever knows We are among you

From the dawn of time we came To find the place of promise Moving silently down Through war disabled centuries

Living many secret lives Unrecognised by human eyes Struggling to reach the aim To dwell in perpetuality
