Sonata Arctica, Cold

Standing with my back against the wall Standing with back against the wall... it's cold Cold...

Day, night, fades to dawn Now the fire breathing dragon I have nursed by my side is turning cold

One night, blinding light Felt the necklace with a golden heart get cold Against the wall, against the wall, it's cold

Why can't this make me warm on winter's nights Maybe your heart has stone cold gold inside

Dancing with my back against the wall Dancing with my back against the wall And again

Why can't you make me warm on winter's nights Maybe your heart has stone cold gold inside

Unless you feel the fire deep inside A golden heart won't keep you warm at night

But when the memory has a face no more And the days are getting longer When all the words unspoken die away

Believe the wisdom written on the walls Maybe the road ahead is golden The white thunderbird will drive away, fly away, fly away

Why can't you make me warm on winter's nights Maybe your heart has stone cold gold inside Unless you feed the fire deep inside A golden heart won't keep you warm at night

Maybe your heart has stone cold gold inside
