Sophie Ellis-Bextor, When The Storm Has Blown

Like a flower that cannot bloom Or the snow that falls in June You're a thirst that's never quenched When the storm has blown over we'll start again

Like a wound that never heals All the sorrow you can't conceal You're the actor that won't pretend When the storm has blown over we'll start again

Don't be so numb Your time will come So pick it up from where you left Carry on It's enough to be strong If we both... whether the storm

Like a star that never dies Or a broken lullaby I can see you need a friend When the storm has blown over we'll start again