

Star Salzman, Temporary Insanity

Every time I look into your eyes,
I feel like I'm home again,
Back to the place where this began.

Do you remember when we were so much younger?
We thought that love was something that lasted forever.
Well I remember. I remember well.

From all the chances that we take, from all the choices that we've made
I still believe...

That love is something more than temporary insanity and I'm
I'm going insane.

We believed them when they said,
That love could conquer everything,
And everything was fine.

But you've grown far too used to your ordinary world
To live in mine, to live in mine.

From all the chances that we take, from all the choices that we've made
I still believe...

That love is something more than temporary insanity and I'm
I'm going insane.

Sometimes life can pass you by.
Take you by surprise, leave you wondering why.

Why does my life seem so complicated?
Why is it wrong to love you the way I did?

So would you think I've gone insane
If I told you to take my hand, tonight?

From all the chances that we take, from all the choices that we've made
I still believe...

That love is something more than temporary insanity and I'm
I'm going insane.
