Stavesacre, Stars & Clouds

sunlight... such a beautiful day to say good-bye we try to look our best thinking of you how can i pretend when inside... none of this seems right the timing isn't mine there were things we needed to make right was so long, i never dreamed that i would see the end, that we wouldn't make amends come short of reconciling, still memories remind me he was so calm still and quiet precious and powerless but somehow strong he carried on did he realize that you were gone? i don't know... i see you in him. in voices, faces, expressions as long as i may stay i will pray the same to live a life like a child and never to forget what i know loving is to hear him speaking of you he knew exactly what was happening said you were born today his favorite person in the world he's different a breeze of fresh air laced with a touch of somewhere familiar he's tomorrow, he's starting over he's treasure and survival walk the beach with him talk the day away and when the sun winds down and the stars come out he... could name one after you as only a child could do put you above, not behind him till the end... a bright place past the clouds and darkness, distance