

Steel Prophet, Montag

It's a pleasure to burn
The flame warms my skin
Four hundred fifty one degrees
When book paper burns
And it burns, and we burn We're firemen
long ago I heard they put fires out Now we blaze ideas for you

I grin a fierce grin
As flames turn me back Kerosene is spit from this hose
The blood it pounds in my head
In my head, your books are dead
Thoughts in your head, Books can't be read or you'll be dead big brother said thoughts are dead

It's fine work that we do being a fireman has it's rewards Monday burn Melville
Wednesday-Wordsworth
Friday-Faulkner

Burn books to ash then burn the ash

Don't question what I do Questions are just for fools
Houses have always been flame proof Firemen don't put out flames we've always burnt books everyone knows

burn books to ash then burn the ash
