

Stephen Kellogg, See You Later, See You Soon

Shot through with adrenaline to fire up my excited
Help me believe in myself, get the starter to start Fifteen burning balls of fire, ten days since we left
No one understands me like the whiskey on my breath
Ten minutes to showtime, Baby stop your crying
Everybody knows why, There's just no time
See you later, See you soon
See you later alligator, I will see you in the moon
Suicide club's on a mission cause they hate their jobs and other guys Everything's tougher then it has to be, another clich' from the wise
But somewhere east of that solo and a little bit west of the bridge
Was the singular kind of moment you remember as long as you live
Sometimes just before showtime, I swear I might end up crying
Letting go of my fears and my landlords
That's the difference between living and dying
As kids we'd pretend to be pirates
And talk about starting a band
But the older that we got, the more that we forgot
That greed and treasure go hand in hand
See you later, See you soon
See you later alligator, I will see you in the moon
See you later, See you soon
Are the words I always say
See you later, See you soon, maybe on some sunny day
See you later, See you soon
See you later little button, I will try to get home soon
