

Stephen Speaks, Love Song

I don't wanna write a love song
I don't wanna say just what I'm feeling
I wanna tell you that I'm reeling with the thought of you
Well I don't wanna say that I'm in love
Even though my heart is pounding in my ears
My insecurities, my fears, leave me hanging here
This guitar is in my hand, and from, darling, where I stand
I don't see another choice but to give into you
Though I'm shaking in my boots,
I have to tell you the whole truth, kind of like the way this feels, being terrified of you

I don't wanna write a love song
I don't wanna write a love song

I don't wanna write a love song
I can never tell you just how I feel
How our love can be this real but still not be good enough for you
Well I don't wanna try and write down all the things that I can't even say to you
Without stumbling my way through letting you know I'm a fool
But I guess I made it clear, must be dead between the ears
To have someone like you and still be wrestling with my fears
But I guess it's plain enough, I'm a sucker for your love
And when push comes to shove, I'd write forever about you

I don't wanna write a love song

I don't wanna write a love song
I don't wanna say just what I'm feeling
I wanna tell you that I'm reeling with the thought of you
Well I don't wanna say that I'm in love
Even though my heart is pounding in my ears
My insecurities, my fears, leave me hanging here
This guitar is in my hand, and from, darling, where I stand
I don't see another choice but to sit down
And start to write our love song

I don't wanna write a love song
