Suzanne Vega, Lightning

Lightning struck a while ago And it's blazing much too fast But give it rain of waiting time And it will surely pass Blow over

And it's happening so quickly As I feel the flaming time And I grope about the embers To relieve my stormy mind Blow over

Shaken this has left me
And laughing and undone
With a blinding bolt of sleeplessness
That's just begun
And a windy crazy running
Through the nights and through the days
And a crackling
Of the time burned away
Burned away

Now I feel it in my blood All hot and sharp and white With a whipcrack and a thunder And a flash of flooding light

But there'll be a thick and smoky Silence in the air When the fire finally dies And I'm wondering who'll be left there

In the ashes of the time Burned away Burned away
