

Switchfoot, Daylight To Break

(Jon: No, I will, I'm just going to sing this track first)

I've seen the darkest things
Crawling inside of me
I've seen the monsters come alive
I've seen the enemy
The man that follows me
Searching the darkness for a light

Waiting for daylight to break up this room
Waiting for daylight to break
I've been alone in the dark I've been dreaming
And waking up without you
I've been waking up without you for too long

Back in the tragedy
I've made a mess of me
My bitter means, my bitter ends, yea
I see the irony
It gets the best of me
Dying to be made new again, again

Waiting for daylight to break up this room
Waiting for daylight to break
I've been alone in the dark I've been dreaming the day
When dreamers are awake
The sun hits my eyes
And everything is right
I've been waking up without you
I've been waking up without you
I've been warring alarms 'til you were in my arms
I've been waking up without you
I've been waking up without you for too long

Waiting for daylight to break up the room
Waiting, waiting
I've been alone in the dark I've been dreaming the day
When dreamers are awake
The sun hits my eyes
And everything is right
I've been waking up without you
I've been waking up without you
I've been warring alarms 'til you were in my arms
I've been waking up without you
I've been waking up without you for too long
