

Tanita Tikaram, The Cappuccino Song

The woman smiles, the cafe feels like home to you
And as she glances through the magazine you feel somehow, she's seen you, too

All my life I thought you said
All my life I heard you say
It'll be all right
(all my life)
If you stay for all my life, for all my life

As she turns her face I feel unsure, is it foolish to want much more?
And as I place the moments in the frame it's to these, I return again

All my life I thought you said
All my life I heard you say
It'll be all right
(all my life)
If you stay for all my life, for all my life

Tell me, tell me
We could be together
We could be forever in my company
