Tara MacLean, Reach

Why did you look the other way When I told you I had something to say Can you imagine that Can you imagine that it could be

Why do you scream at everything unfair Tell me would you know the truth if it were there If you would reach for me If you would reach for me it could be

Something real When your faith has left before the morning Someone there softly breathing A body to awaken When the time comes to tear you A cruel enemy You could hold on to me

What is there that strips you of your pride There is nothing left of you inside If you would reach for me If you would reach for me it could be Something real.....
