The Cure, Lost

I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself

In the head of this stranger in love Holding on giving up To another under faded setting sun

And I wonder where I am...
Could she run away with him?
So happy and so young
And I stare
As I sing in the lost voice of a stranger in love
Out of time letting go
In another world that spins around for fun

And I wonder where I am... Could he ever ask her why? So happy and so young And I stare...but...

I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself

In the heart of this stranger in love Giving up holding on To this other under faded setting sun

And I'm not sure where I am...
Would he really turn away?
So happy and so young
And I stare
As I play out the passion of a stranger in love
Letting go of the time
In this other world that spins around for one

And I'm not sure where I am... Would she know it was a lie? So happy and so young And I stare...but...

I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself

In the soul of this stranger in love No control over one To the other under faded setting sun

And I don't know where I am...
Should he beg her to forgive?
So happy and so young
And I stare...
As I live out the story of a stranger in love
Waking up going on
In the other world that spins around undone

And I don't know where I am... Should she really say goodbye? So happy and so young And I stare...but...

I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself I can't find myself

I got lost in someone else