

The Echoing Green, Waterfall

Autumn comes and the leaves turn brown
Ashes come and we all fall down
I wish I could find a way
To hold the day
Captive to the words you say

You know that it's not easy
To lift these feelings
Up off the ground
And when I seem so distant
I feel your insistent love surround me...

Under the waterfall
I'm finally letting down my walls
Under the waterfall
All my burdens feel so small

Thunder comes and the sky turns gray
Evidence of the world astray
Sometimes it holds me down
With my eyes to the ground
To never see the light of day

Sometimes I feel like running away
On the grayest of days
And the darkest of nights
Yet you replace my sorrow
With the hope of tomorrow
And the coming of light

Under the waterfall
I'm finally letting down my walls
Under the waterfall
All my burdens feel so small

And if the only way to You was down
I'd willingly drown to find You there
Your whispering grace
The tears on your face
Filling the sea of forgiveness

Under the waterfall
I'm finally letting down my walls
Under the waterfall
All my burdens feel so small